Sue Lynch - tenor saxophone
Adrian Northover - soprano saxophone
David Petts - tenor saxophone

As a composer, Petts' musical vision has remained eminently identifiable and resolutely un-classifiable. The modus operandi is that he writes music, sends it to the relevant musicians and then rehearsals, concerts and recordings follow.

Usually a new batch of music surfaces each year and culminates in a cd release.

But recent months have forced everyone to adapt to new working circumstances - for a long time it was impossible to even meet in the same room, let alone rehearse or play concerts.

And so we decided to treat this new batch of music differently.

With no rehearsals, no live instruments, only electronic, computer generated sounds and field recordings were used - taking the original compositions and letting them evolve to a completely different conclusion than would normally occur.

While the overall sound is quite a departure from previous Remote Viewers endeavours, the essence of the music is still recognisable - and remains unclassifiable.
